A Healing Motion
A bill that aims to save lives, stays alive. Bill C-393 passed last night to applause in the House of Commons. The private member’s bill, first brought forward by a former NDP MP and carried forward by Ottawa MP Paul Dewar, aims to improve Canada’s system of supplying affordable life-saving drugs to developing countries...

You Feelin' It, Chicken??
Here's something most of us probably would rather not think about, given how most of their lives go: Chickens may be able to empathize. Thus suggests a new study from the University of Bristol's Veterinary school which measures adult chickens' reaction to mild stress in their chicks. Carol speaks with Joanne...

Pony Up and Wait.
Canadian immigration hopefuls are handing over their dough and then waiting years - currently as many as nine - before their cases are looked at. Meanwhile, Citizenship and Immigration Canada is sitting on nearly 400 million dollars worth of those fees. A Vancouver lawyer says that's unfair. Carol will speak with Richa...

One fish, two fish...
One million sardines show up in the Redondo Beach's King Harbour. Dead. A foot and a half thick. How do you deal with a million dead fish? We're going to find out tonight.

Well, they COULD deal with them using a REALLY BIG strainer! Use booms to corral them all together, then scoop them up! (Not sure they would be fit for consumption, by human or feline.)

Here's an idea of what to do with all these dead fish: freeze them into slabs, and ship them up to the crab fishermen in Dutch Harbor! I'll bet Captains Hansen and Hillstrand and all the rest would be glad to have some inexpensive bait to use in their pots!
